

Shaping a Healthier Future

MOSAIC is a groundbreaking research study that will help us learn about the key health challenges faced by Asians, Native Hawaiians, and Pacific Islanders. Your participation in this long-term health study will help us lay the scientific foundation that will lead to better health for you, your loved ones, and your community.

Multiethnic Observational Study in American Asian and Pacific Islander Communities

Eligibility

- Asian, Native Hawaiian, or Pacific Islander
- 18 to 64 years of age at time of screening
- No plans to move from the area within next five years
- Not in active military service
- Willing to provide health information over an extended study period
- Not currently pregnant

Study Procedures

You will answer some questions first to see if you can join the study. If you are eligible, you will complete surveys and attend an in-person exam where you'll have a physical checkup and give samples like blood and saliva. After that, you'll fill out follow-up surveys after six months and each year.

Minimal Study Risks

The risks from this research study are minimal. Aspects of the in-person exam, such as the blood draw, may cause slight physical discomfort, and survey questions of a personal nature may cause some emotional discomfort.

Compensation

After completing the in-person baseline enrollment activities—including surveys, sample collection, and a physical exam—participants will receive a ClinCard (debit card for research participants) for up to $150 at the time of their visit.

Additionally, participants will receive:
$20 for completing the annual follow-up survey.

$30 for participants who are selected and willing to fill out baseline surveys again.
